Homes Await Them

It is good to learn from the federal officer in charge that far more Canadian homes have been offered for British "guest" children than the number as yet required or likely to be required soon.
Fewer than 1,500 children have thus far come to Canada, and there are standing offers to accommodate many more. However many such offers have been made, it can be said there would have been many times the number had there been as much urgency in the matter as there seemed to be some months ago.

When the Government of Great Britain announced that it would not sponsor a mass migration, for transport reasons, and the public in Canada gathered the impression that there was little use for the time pilling up more offers of accommodation. When it is known that the movement is again assuming larger proportions, more homes will be opened for these very welcome refugees from the Nazi assassins.

An Outlaw Raid

Officially and legally—if there remains any such thing as a law of nations—Italy and Egypt are not at war with each other.
A state of hostility has not been declared —or had not when Graziani began his invasion of Egyptian territory. His status is simply that of a freebooter, who has led armed forces into a friendly country without its consent.

This course of action is in line with the practice of the aggressor allies. They do not admit themselves bound by convention or custom to declare war before they attack a neighbor—nor afterward for the matter of that. Where there is territory that can be grabbed, or occupied as a base for attack on a third power, the appearance of their troops is all the notice the owner of the territory may expect from them.

The Italian expedition, having put itself in the position of an outlaw force, is entitled to no consideration due to an army engaging in recognized war. Members of the force have no right to expect that they will be treated as soldiers if captured. The Egyptians, and the British at their invitation, may shoot the invaders at night—anywhere and under any circumstances—without incurring any accusation of violating international law or treating pirates other than as they deserve.

The raiders will no doubt be treated as though they were soldiers, but that will be done for humane reasons and despite the fact that it Duce has made them outlaws.

Why Did The Bonds Sell Slowly?

It has taken two weeks to sell the $300-000,000 worth of Canada's second issue of war bonds. This is in striking contrast to the eagerness with which successive issues were snapped up during the first Great War.
Then every issue was heavily over-subscribed. The bonds sold like hot cakes.
Each succeeding loan was "put over" in quick order. The securities were in keen demand. It usually happened that by the time the flood of small orders from remote sections reached Ottawa enough applications had come in from great corporations and wealthy individuals to take up all the bonds offered. These had to be divided up pro rata, or the amount of the loan raised, to accommodate all those who wanted to buy.

Why the comparatively weak demand for the present bonds? The reason is obvious. The interest rates offered are lower, 40 per cent lower. On the present loan, the interest is 3 per cent, the bonds selling at a slight discount which gives the buyer a shade more return. Interest receipts are subject to income taxation.
Six domestic loans were raised during the former war. On the first three the interest rate was 5 per cent. On the last three it was 3½ per cent. And all but two of these issues were exempt from taxation —the interest received by the holders.
That explains why there was a rush of buyers every time a war loan was put on the market during the "other" war. Who wouldn't buy Dominion 5 per cent or 5½ per cent bonds? There was no more profitable investment in sight. It was good business to borrow money to buy the bonds; or to divert working capital from ordinary purposes and put it into those long-term, high-interest, tax-free securities.

The present war is being financed on a different basis. It is remembered now, in the light of a harrowing experience, that high interest rates mean high taxation for many years to come. Hence the interest rates are being kept down, and the income from the bonds is not tax-free. There is no incentive to sacrifice other securities to buy 3 per cent bonds.

Naturally the orders for the second issue totalled up slowly, for these came in great numbers from people who depend for a living on the proceeds of their labor or the profits from business enterprises, and who bought the bonds from a sense of duty.

He Dare Not Call It Off

While it would be folly to assume so, there are some reasons to hope the invasion of Britain has failed before it started.
An advance instalment of inequivalent gales did more or less damage to the vast floods of barges and other craft gathered to transport the storm troops across the Channel and the North Sea; and must have suggested to Herr Goering what would be the destination of his expedition if winds and waves should catch his flocks of tuns in open water. The R.A.F. bombers have been paying visits to the jumping Norway to Bordeaux, with undoubted results upon both the numbers of his transports and the apprehensions of the Marshal. The effect of these discouraging preliminaries must be to confirm his known skepticism as to the success of the risky venture which the Fuehrer has ordered him to undertake.

That Herr Hitler will abandon the scheme hardly seems possible. His prestige would suffer if he backed down after all the elaborate preparations. His boast-ings would be hard to explain away. His tradition of invincibility would be discounted among his followers. His personal hatred for the "English" would fail of the intended purpose.

That the invasion will be attempted is as strongly probable now as it was a week ago. But the prospects that it can succeed have been substantially lessened, and the confidence of British authorities and public correspondingly strengthened by the timely gales and no less timely activities of the R.A.F.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Straw shows how the wind blows.

Young James Roosevelt has secured distribution rights to a much-discussed British film, "Pastor Hall." His American president, is to narrate a prologue to the film which Robert E. Sherwood, American dramatist, has written for him. The film, "The Conqueror," Toller, brilliant German playwright, who fought for his country in his student days, the World War, only to be driven into exile and suicide by his Nazi persecutors in his manhood, had not lived for this hour of triumph. For "Pastor Hall" is none other than Toller's "The Conqueror," based on the life and tribulation of Pastor Niemoeller—for which Toller earned the unenvied honor of the Nazis.

The film, from all reports, is literally "packed with dynamite." Little of the horrors of terror revealed in the British White Paper on concentration camp cruelties has been overlooked by the producers. As a piece of anti-Nazi propaganda it is calculated to bring before audiences the horror of Nazi rule, with all the resources of sound, action and brilliant acting. And the son of the American president is bringing it to United States, with the wife of the president speaking a prologue to it.

Herr Hitler has taken from the Socialist his cry that all wars are made by capitalists. He has hushed the cry against munition makers, so roundly denounced by reformers as "merchants of death."

Interlocking directorates between great firms that make munitions among other things there is no doubt.

BOTTLENECKS seem to be the time to have been drawn from the makers of munitions.

Now being piloted, are those firms that stand out for bigger profits, and those of material by munition manufacturers who have jumped their prices. Last week the government decided a group of five concerns before a federal grand jury in New York for controlling the market for benzolene. Benzolene is a soft powdery colloidal clay used in paper and pottery making. Finding it was useful to mix with sand and clay for casting molds, the companies are said to have secured patents for the mixing of benzolene. Only those who buy their benzolene from the five corporations may use the patents.

This trade device restricts the casting of engine blocks, gun-carriages, tractor treads, etc., so the U.S. government has indicted the corporations.

Indicted also are three big concerns that make "patents" of the special kind, namely, the industrial clay used in paper and pottery making. Finding it was useful to mix with sand
said to have secured patents for the mixing of
from the five corporations may use the patents.

Many of the "bottle-necks" in industrial production of wartime needs are shown to be caused by greed on the part of munition makers. It is not usually thought of as munition makers.

Of all the nations in the Nazi-occupied portions of Europe, none has shown more dogged resistance to the invaders than Holland. A stubborn people, their heads like that of Henley's "Invictus" are "bloody but unbowed."
A proclamation issued by Dr. van der Stoep, the Nazi dictator of Holland, warns that all Dutch are "verboten" flower girls who sell margold, forget-me-nots and white carnations will be arrested and tried on charges of treason.
The decorating of graves, hanging of flags and ribbons and wearing of badges are all "verboten."

Where is the treason in a lovely flower?
Well, any girl who sells flowers to the Dutch that the lawful reigning family of Holland is the House of Orange. Forget-me-nots may be secret tokens of remembrance and white carnations are Prince Bernhard's favorite flower, commonly worn by the Dutch in his honor on his birthday, June 25.

The Hollanders don't seem to understand that Herr Hitler's aim is to bring peace and happiness to Europe.

As I write, a merry party is in progress "next door" in a commodious farmhouse in the vicinity of Stanley Park, Vancouver, on which my spouse of the year I have made a floating home. If I hadn't known of my own knowledge the reason for the party—the society gals say—I'd take it as a coincidence.

GOOD DEEDS BY A GAIN OF AIN. Just six days ago, a young man, who was principal in this cleaning up after carpenters had abandoned the bedroom, was found dead in the bed. He was an old man. Not till the tide had carried the stuff out of sight did he discover the shoe was in which he had been hidden. It was a couple of shoes. (Why the hiding place is another story.)

All sorts of semi-humorous suggestions were tendered for recovering the shoe bank. He had stopped payment of the cheque and given the $70 up as lost; to his astonishment, this morning the twined cheque had been running all week had seemingly floated his shoe back again between his feet and mine during the night. There was the money, wet but safe.

I've read something in the Bible in support of charity about casting bread on the waters and finding it again after many days, with covered with jam. But I never knew the doctrine applied to old shoes and cash money.

The $70 is apparently intended to relieving the pangs of the thirsty, judging by the sounds that float across the water.

THE REASONED COURAGE OF THE BRITISH

The awe-inspiring courage of the British people could not be outdone if along with their brave hearts they did not also have clear heads.
They fight on and they are determined to fight back not in the manner of men reacting blindly but as men who know the position, and the odds, and the real alternative. Only a great people could do this. The British are a great people.
They have organized the largest security force the world has ever known, and they are aware of all their mistakes they have extended more widely the area of law and order than it was ever before extended on earth. This great history is in them now, and now at last they are greatly led by a man who knows their history; and having the quality of greatness and being greatly led, their reason does not undermine but the contrary strengthens the courage of their hearts.
They see clearly. As long as they see clearly, they will not be intimidated or demoralized.
What they see so clearly is not only that if they resist they will eventually win but that if they do not resist, they are utterly and absolutely lost. They know that if they do not resist to the uttermost in the British Isles, and that, where they defeated them, if they do not resist in their empire, they will be disarmed and believed. For they resist at home, knowing that if ever they were conquered in the British Isles, their fleet and their air force and their command police in the outer world would continue to protect them against enslavement and destruction. The essence of their courage is the knowledge that British dominion is not in British alone, but that the lot of the people of Britain can never be hopeless as long as the empire and the fleet remain in being.

This is the great lesson taught by the tragic experience of France. The French people were poorly led and in the crisis of June the men who came to power were not men of high vision and courage. They made the terrible mistake of thinking that they could ingratiate themselves with the victors by rendering themselves completely helpless. So they surrendered not merely France which was overrun but the empire, which was intact and the fleet and the air force as well.
The surrender was complete and the French people were left at the mercy of the victors. The unprecedented only of hastening to fasten upon themselves the guilt for the war and to exterminate their conquerors. They were misled by their own stupidity. They were misled by the better terms they would receive. No greater error was ever committed by an intelligent people. The French people were misled by General de Gaulle, continued their resistance in Africa and Asia Minor and on the seas, they would at the very last have had some power which would have enabled them to negotiate with Germany and Italy. But, instead, they threw in their hand before they had played it out. And since in the world as it today is, there is no check and no mercy, the more helpless they are, the worse they will be treated.

Indeed, what the French found from the German domination was the destruction which has visited upon the Poles is not Hitler's magnanimity toward Marshal Pétain or his admiration for M. Laval, but simply and solely the power of the Seventy years ago today (Sept. 20, 1870) the first beacons installed by the Dominion of Canada were lit on Bird Rock, 55 miles from St. Paul's island, one of the most lonely and treacherous points in the white Gulf of St. Lawrence. The beacons had been lit and day beacons along the river under the Province of Canada, quite primitive, and one of the first duties of the Dominion was to see that the St. Lawrence and the Gulf of St. Lawrence were lit. It is like now the naval authorities and the ship captains who have lit the beacons. The Bird Rock lighthouse has had its tragedies. Six out of the first eight keepers met violent deaths by explosion. The lighthouse was and yet there never has been a lack of applicants for the job when it became vacant.

On this date in 1870, the first lighthouse was lit by the French at Louisbourg in 1734, and the first in Nova Scotia at Sambro Head, in Halifax harbor, in 1736, the same year as Saunders, American and Wolfe captured Louisbourg for keeps.

Another "first" in aids to navigation belonging to St. John. In 1854 Robert Poulin first advocated the use of a steam whaler as a means of warning ships entering the harbor in foggy weather. Five years later he invented an apparatus which he erected on the island and which became the first steam fog horn constructed and operated in the world.

This invention is commemorated on a tablet on the wall of the St. John's harbor. The harbor which also records the fact that Benjamin Tibbets, of Queen's county, built the first vessel in the world to be propelled by a compound steam engine. She was named the "Henderson" and was on the Saint John river for 50 years after 1842.

UNCOVERING THE CLIFF
At one of our Canadian camps, on the shore of the lake, is a cliff forty feet high. Last year we awoke to the fact that the face of Castle Rock, as we call it, is being obscured by trees.
So our men turned woodsmen, and cut the hindering timber away.

Some lovely trees crested into the waterfront. The lovely rock was seen and was seen for every fisherman on the lake. "The good is the enemy of the bad," runs the proverb. One of life's serious problems is how to get rid of those habits and possessions which cause the best. Many personalities would be great and lovely, if only the undesirable and trees of cumbersome and trivial practices could be removed.

Not that we have the courage, our Father, to sacrifice, when necessary, the lesser goods of life, that the beauty of the Lord may be revealed in us.

SECOND VISIT TO CANADIANS PAID BY DUKE

Gloucester Spends a Busy Day With 1st Division—Tea and Doughnuts

By EDWIN JOHNSON
SOMERSET, ENGLAND, Sept. 20.—The Duke of Gloucester, who has been living with the British troops in the field, spent a busy afternoon Thursday visiting units of the Canadian 1st Division.

It was the second consecutive day the King's brother visited the Canadian. Wednesday he inspected a Shermans tank company, and on Thursday he visited the 1st Division. The Duke was greeted at corps headquarters by Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton and Maj.-Gen. G. B. Pearkes, commander of the Canadian 1st Division. He was then escorted to the 2nd Divisional command post, where he met the divisional commander, Major-General G. B. Pearkes.

After lunch, the party made an extended tour of the 1st Divisional units, which are now in the front line of the division.

The Duke displayed the keenest interest in the formalities of the visit, and he made a life of the scene. Before departing he was presented with a letter from the commanding officer, "That was a fine show. All your ladies are looking well."

Later the Duke of Gloucester watched a concert of the 1st Division, which was given by the 1st Divisional band. The Duke was accompanied by the Duke of Kent, the Duke of York, and the Duke of Edinburgh.

The Duke of Gloucester was accompanied by the Duke of Kent, the Duke of York, and the Duke of Edinburgh. They were all in the front line of the division.

Before bidding farewell to the Canadian troops, the Duke of Gloucester was presented with a letter from the commanding officer, "That was a fine show. All your ladies are looking well."

The Tigers won their games with two secondary pitchers, Floyd Giebel and Dizzy Trout, and had Buck Newsom, their No. 1 man, ready to fire against Mel Harder Thursday. New York Yankees shoved White Sox virtually out of the pennant picture and kept themselves within four games of the lead on a 10-1 victory.

The fantastic American League pennant struggle reaches a new climax today as Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers come up in their series with each other on September 20-21. The Indians are 48-35 and the Tigers are 47-36.

Brooklyn Fan Yields To Old Urge

Many a time the entranced fans of Flatbush have made the welkin ring with their roar of "Kill the Umpire!" That roar was especially bitter and loud as Umpire George Magerkurth, in a close play enabled the first-place Cincinnati Reds to use the Brooklyn Dodgers out of a 4 to 3 advantage.

Not content with mere vocal objections was this dyed-in-the-wool Dodger fan who, known as Umpire Magerkurth, pummeled the umpire with a stick. The fan, identified as Frank Gernhardt, seized from the stands as the last man went out in the 10th inning to finish the game, and caught up with Umpire Magerkurth as the latter was going to the dressing room—the battle was on.

THE challenge baseball series between the champion All-Stars will be resumed on Sunday afternoon at Renfrew park with a doubleheader starting at 2:00 p.m.

All-Stars, managed by Dick Spurr, took the first game behind the pitching of Walter Johnson of Ponaka by a count of 5-2. Ralph Morgan pitched his Dodgers to a 6-2 win in the second game to even it up.

The series was held up during the present week while efforts were made to stage a game at Clarke stadium, which would have been an experiment. It was finally decided that various problems involved could not be overcome in time and the series might have been held in the future.

A decision may be reached in the future on Sunday since it is a bit of five days. If either club can take both ends of the bargain ball it is a good sign for the All-Stars to be on hand at the park at 10 p.m. Sunday. This includes the season, but he has not in fact, being in goal.

NAVAL FORCES OF DOMINION ARE GROWING

Personnel Expands More Than Six Times Since Outbreak of War

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—Canada's naval forces now are more than six times as large in terms of men as they were on the outbreak of war and a waiting list of 1,000 would-be recruits attests the Royal Canadian Navy's expansion to man the additional ships which will come into commission in the next few months. Although small as the navies of the great seapowers, the Canadian navy contains the type of ship which has proved to be most in demand for continuous service in the present war.

Men Seeking Terms Of Order On Hog Grading

After discussion with trade minister H. G. M. MacKinnon, H. D. Mullin, Alberta minister of agriculture, will communicate with H. G. M. MacKinnon, federal agriculture minister, to ask explanation of a reported Dominion order-in-council relating to hog grading. It is reported that the order calls for grading of hogs in dress and will do away with all future grading of live hogs for market.

The kind of war that the brunt of naval operations on destroyers and the small Canadian fleet was able to render useful help to the British destroyers in addition to patrolling Canadian territorial waters and aiding in the formation of a fleet of commerce from Canadian shores.

ARMED SHIPS

Although the destroyers are the most powerful fighting units of the Canadian navy, a total of more than 125 armed ships are in commission. These include three fast merchant ships, converted into auxiliary cruisers, and a large number of anti-submarine and mine-sweeping ships.
